How do you manage your time in high school, like how long do you study or do you have to be good at every science subject and maths subject?

Jenny Martin

How did I manage my time? As I think I mentioned, I grew up in a very large family so there's a lot of chores to do so I just arranged a time every evening where I would do homework but I had to do chores around that so it was very organised, I guess, and at undergraduate level as well, I had to travel for about an hour and a half each way, so about three hours travel. I did a lot of work on the train and just was very organized. I didn't realise how organized until I stopped actually 'cause I don't think I'm as organised anymore. I took the general science subjects. I did Physics, Chemistry and the Maths subjects but in retrospect, I probably should have done a biology subject because that's where I'm really based, (it's great in retrospect), instead of probably Physics.

In terms of managing time, I think I've always been somebody that has 101 things on my plate, like I just say yes to everything so I'll have sport and I'll have dance and I'll have choir and you know, through high school I was sort of doing bits of everything so in a way, it really forced me, like I couldn't procrastinate because I'd have something on that night so I'd have to do my study at a particular time so that really worked well for me because I just love having lots of things to do and in terms of science and maths subjects, I did traditional Maths B, Maths C, Phys, Chem, and I also did Modern History at high school 'cause I really enjoyed history and I got similar marks, As and Bs in those subjects. I wasn't always the top of my class or anything but I did okay.

I can't, yeah, I've already talked about my subject choices so we won't go over them again but yeah, with time management, I'm always a big fan of starting things when you're given them. I found at Uni especially, I can't really remember school, I know it wasn't that long ago but I can't remember, but yeah, so many people at Uni, I'd be like, how are you going on that assignment and they were like, oh, I haven't started it yet. I was like, oh. So that's what I always do, as soon as someone gives me something to do, it still happens at work, whenever, okay, I'll start thinking about that now and then I'll go, oh, I've got too much stuff to do and yeah, that's what I'm always doing. Start it at the start so you don't have to cram at the end. It's a lot easier.
